The new fields will be blank by default, and pre-existing content will be kept.

With the new Profile content type, people can now have a profile page on SF.gov.

The new Profile page template

For each profile, editors need to decide if they want to:

- Not have a page on SF.gov and link offsite to an external URL (aka pass-through)
- 2. Have a page on SF.gov using the new Profile template

1. 2.

The new fields

 There is one new required field: "Profile type" (City employee or External).

- Primary job title fields are for the person's main occupation, like their day job, NOT their commission role.
- The rest of the fields should be self-explanatory, but the content team should test to make sure!

You can add Profiles to Departments, Public bodies, Locations, and the homepage.

Same places as before! But with some new functionality...

Add Profile Group

- This is the new Profile Group. Use it to adding groups of people to any page that supports it.
- It looks very similar to the old one, but you can add more detail about the commissioner's tenure on a Public Body page

On Departments, Locations and the homepage

Simply add the Profiles that you want.

On Public bodies

You will now also add information about their specific role on the public body.

Where the commission position info is used

On the public body page

Commission position is displayed above their name on the People section.

On External profiles

Full info is displayed at the top

On City employee profiles

Commission roles are displayed in "Additional city roles"

If you choose City employee

- Their primary job will be listed at the top of the profile page.
- The "Department or public body" that they work for is also shown as a link.
- Public body roles are in an "Additional roles" section.

- If you select a "Department or public body", the address, phone, and emails will be pulled in from the agency to the profile.
- Additionally, you can manually add contact info to the profile node.
- If there are 2 addresses, we display the one manually added on the profile node.

Where does this come from???

Some past People need to be fixed.

Many people (especially non-staff) have their commission role input as their primary job.

Cecilia on the Health Commission has "Finance and Planning Committee Chair" as primary job title. This role should be part of the Commission, not part of Cecilia..

Her actual job is "Director of Strategy, Transgender Law Center". This allows profiles to have different roles on multiple commissions. Individual info goes on the profile.

Role info goes on the public body.
